JULIAN ARGÜELLES TRIO

Partita

Julian Argüelles (saxophone), John Hebert (bass), Tom Rainey (drums)

"The artificial divisions set up between "European" and "American" jazz are blown apart by carefully crafted collaborations like Romance Among The Fishes. Where the fusion of Ken Vandermark with Norway's Atomic explores the fiery side of jazz, this four-way collaboration investigates a cooler but no less fascinating aspect. All praise too to Basho Music, rapidly emerging as one of the UK's most dynamic organisations in promoting and recording contemporary jazz" allaboutjazz.com

This tour will promote two albums – Liam Noble's Romance Amongst the Fishes (SRCD13-2), released on Basho Records and launched at the Purcell Room in London at the 2005 London Jazz Festival, and Julian Arguelles's Partita (SRCD 17-2) to be released this autumn. The tour will be supported with a full PR and marketing campaign.

Both albums were recorded in New York and continue a constant theme at Basho of collaborations between British and North American players. Liam Noble's Romance Among the Fishes, recorded in August 2004 (with Phil Robson, Drew Gress and Tom Rainey), came out of a commission for the 2004 Cheltenham Jazz Festival. The music demonstrates Liam Noble's highly original approach to composition. Tom Rainey's highly original percussive style and Drew Gress's virtuosic and responsive bass playing were Liam's inspiration for the work. With his long-term associate guitarist Phil Robson, whose versatility complements Liam's inventiveness as an improvising pianist, the quartet have created pieces that demonstrate a strong musical empathy between players whose backgrounds and influences are very diverse. The music has developed a style and energy of its own since its original airing at the Cheltenham Festival where John Fordham described it in the following way:

'The sharp-end American bass/drums duo of New York downtowners Drew Gress and Tom Rainey were mixed into another cocktail on Monday, playing the music of the British pianist Liam Noble, with Phil Robson on guitar...the percussively algebraic finale Jitters brought inventive collective jittering of a clarity, focus and density that sounded like the music of regular partners'. John Fordham, The Guardian

The Julian Arguelles Trio (with Michael Formanek and Tom Rainey) formed in June 2004, and has toured in the UK and the USA. They recorded a CD in June 2005 in NYC, featuring Julian's original compositions, which will be released this autumn. Julian is highly regarded as a composer as well as an improviser and this trio will again try to develop the relationship between the two. The music will be loosely inspired by the many nonchord saxophone trios to have emerged in the history of jazz especially the Sonny Rollins' trio, Ornette Coleman Trio and an early Jan Garbarek trio. The music will span the possibilities of improvisation/composition by using the many influences of Julian's compositions and these three improvisers

www.liamnoble.co.uk

After studying music at Oxford University and the postgraduate course at the Guildhall, Noble became the regular pianist with Stan Sulzmann (in both duo and quartet settings) on John Taylor's recommendation. He went on to work in the bands of Anita Wardell, Harry Beckett, Tim Whitehead and John Stevens as well as recording and touring with cult minimalist composer Moondog. During this period, he also performed with John Taylor (as part of Stan Sulzmann's two piano quintet), Kenny Wheeler and Lol Coxhill.

Three years after leaving the Guildhall, Noble recorded the solo piano album "Close Your Eyes", which featured free improvisations, compositions and interpretations of tunes by (amongst others) Ornette Coleman, Annette Peacock and Richard Rodgers. In Jazz Journal,

Richard Palmer referred to him as "...a writer of considerable idiomatic and emotional range ...he knows the instrument's pantheon from Tatum to Taylor..."

In 1997, he joined the Bobby Wellins Quartet, a band that combines a standard repertoire with a contemporary sense of interaction. A CD, "The Best is Yet to Come" is available on Jazzziti Records. He is also a member of the Christine Tobin Band and the Randy Brecker English Sextet, with whom he recently performed at Cheltenham Festival. A duo project with Paul Clarvis playing music from West Side Story combines well-known material with a "stream of consciousness" improvisatory angle. In April 2002, a commission from Birmingham Jazz resulted in a song cycle based on Japanese Death Poetry featuring the contrasting voices of Kelsey Michael (vocalist with the High Llammas) and Christine Tobin, with Dave Wickins and Chris Biscoe. Noble plays keyboards and samples throughout, marking a new foray into electronica inspired by artists such as Aphex Twin and Arto Lindsay. He is also a regular member of the Julian Siegel Group and appears on Siegel's much acclaimed recent album "Close Up" (Sound Recordings - mactwo).

In 2002 Noble released his highly acclaimed quintet album IN THE MEANTIME (Basho Records). His compositions, highly individual, quirky, sometimes humorous or intensely lyrical demonstrate his continuing interest in combining unorthodox structural design with improvisation using an ensemble of highly contrasting players. Focusing on the multi-reed front line of Stan Sulzmann and Chris Biscoe (on the rarely heard alto clarinet), and the rhythm section of Paul Clarvis and Mick Hutton.

"A highly inventive and thoughtful musician, Noble graces any band he joins, while his own music combines characterful composing with fresh, risk-embracing improvisation....." "...a brilliant pianist...who hardly plays a solo without at least one turn of phrase that brings you to the edge of your seat". John Fordham, The Guardian

"Liam Noble is quietly establishing himself as a major voice". Yorkshire Post 4*

"...proves that the spirit of free improvisation is not dead, but has been merely sleeping....Inspirational". Chrissie Murray, Ronnie Scott's Magazine

"An articulate, accomplished affair" Jazzwise 4*

Madeline Bell, Horatio 'El Negro' Hernandez, John Riley, Barbara Dennalin, Anne Hampton Callaway, Mark Murphy, Georgy Fame, Martin Taylor, Michael McDonald & many more.

"Phil Robson is one of a crop of young UK jazz guitarists who combine the technical expertise of classic beboppers such as Wes Montgomery and Kenny Burrell with the bite and muscle of a post-funk generation raised on Hendrix, Scofield and Metheny. ... He has a varied repertoire of multicultural materials far more deeply rooted in Britain than in Philadelphia or New York." John Fordham, The Guardian

john hebert – bassist/ composer

John Hebert moved to New York City from New Orleans in 1994, where he has become a highly in demand jazz bassist. He has worked with world class musicians Paul Bley, Lee Konitz, Blue Note recording artist Andrew Hill, ECM recording artist Kenny Wheeler, Dave Liebman, Grammy Winner Maria Schneider, Grammy nominated Fred Hersch, John Abercrombie, Blue Note recording artist Greg Osby, New York Voices, Tim Berne, Mat Maneri and many others. John continues to tour extensively in the USA, Europe and Canada performing in major jazz festivals and venues. John is also a proud endorser of Presonus Audio Electronics, Inc. and Thomastik-Infeld Strings.

"A ubiquitous figure on the downtown music scene in recent years, Hebert is a key figure...and a formidable soloist, as he shows on "Effluence" and "Cascade"... All About Jazz 2005

"Hebert has everything one would want in a bassist, excellent time and tone, sensitivity as an accompanist, and good solos." Paul Combs 2001

tom rainey - percussionist
